My experience

I came to A.S.A.P somewhat unwillingly. I had already been through two other BOPs. I lied & conned my way through each, and didn't want to do it again. I wasn't looking forward to my third. After everything I still was not ready to quit. I did a pretty good b/s job for the first few weeks of A.S.A.P. Then I got arrested again. Wow the <sup>4th</sup> time I'd been arrested, all related to Alcohol. Who would have ever imagined. I began strongly thinking about quitting and thought maybe A.S.A.P could help. I still could not envision myself having fun being sober. As the weeks went by I became more comfortable at A.S.A.P and actually started to look forward to it. (In large part because of these arrests) I enjoyed talking with the three smart counselors who actually cared and wanted to help. Recovering around other kids your same age helps a lot also. In the end A.S.A.P became kind of a place of refuge, where I could talk about my problems, in a comfortable environment. To people
